POSTGRADUATES DEVELOPMENT

Victoria Asoi

The School of Engineering and Information technology aims to improve our research and development activities. As only by being at the forefront of knowledge, we can produce high quality graduates at both the undergraduate and graduate levels. Towards this objective, the School has started one postgraduate course, called Masters of Oil and Gas Engineering and is currently working on another masters by coursework program. It is hoped that these two new masters by coursework programs will provide an alternative route to graduates wishing to develop their knowledge further, but are not keen on the available masters by research courses. The total number of masters by coursework students is still very small (only 8 in MOG) compared to those doing masters by research.
