

FSMP Launches High-Fibre Biscuit

Noorfarahzilah Masri

On June 25, 2015, the Faculty of Food Science and Nutrition (FSMP) officially launched their latest product “High Fibre Biscuits” which was advertised on the official website of UMS and promoted to all UMS staff via e-mail announcement.

The biscuits were designed exclusively to be high in fibre, preservative-free, and without trans-fat to improve health benefits. It has a crunchy texture and delicious milky and buttery taste.

Positive response from the customers especially during the celebration of Hari Raya Aidilfitri showed the potency of the biscuits to be developed further in the near future. Cooperation from all committee members of the project as well as the help of FSMP staffs directly and indirectly has proven to be fruitful and even managed to strengthen the ties between faculty members. It is expected that this bond will support the creation of new ideas with highly potential market values.

The Operation and Development of Food Products Unit will continue to strive in developing a wide range of food products from the faculty. The unit welcomes ideas not only from faculty members but also from the researchers to help in developing innovative food products that can be marketed mainly to the community.

Reservation for the biscuit is open throughout the year. Besides of being purchased for daily consumption, it is also suitable for a souvenir owing to its beautiful packaging.
