To support its commitment in providing and maintaining high standards of safety and health in the workplace, the School of Medicine has recently organised its first Basic Occupational Safety and Health (OSH) Workshop for the SPU support staff on 3 to 4 May 2011. This two-day workshop was organised by OSH committee at Media & Educational Technology Unit.

This workshop was facilitated by AP Dr Shamsul Bahari Samsudin, deputy chairman of OSH committee of SPU. The main objectives of this workshop were to understand the occupational safety and health policies and legislation, to raise awareness of risks in the workplace and also the ways to safeguard the safety and health of the faculty members.

Following the presentation on the Emergency Response Plan and Safety and Health at Workplace, the participants were divided into several groups to discuss the safety manuals for various safety issues.
