KOTA KINABALU: A former University Malaysia Sabah (UMS) student from China has chosen Sabah to expand his business.

Micheal He Long, a 2012 graduate from UMS's Faculty of Business, Economics and Accountancy, said that he has tried his hands on various businesses in China since he graduated.

"Some of my businesses such as in solar, nano-tech zinc, restaurant, hotel and also a tourist centre are still on-going, but I have come back to Sabah because I miss it," he said when receiving a courtesy call from UMS Alumni Center director, Darwis Awang, at his office in Kolombong here.

Micheal said he is keen to help and collaborate with any former UMS students to develop business here.

"I believe this collaboration will not only help other UMS alumni but will also be able to boost the state's economic growth," he explained.

Darwis meanwhile said the visit was part of the UMS Alumni Centre's initiatives to meet, promote and build connection with UMS alumni across the nation.

"At the same time, we also help them to promote, market, and expand their service and product to fellow UMS alumni as well as to the community.

"This kind of programme will continue with the objective of tracking more alumni across the nation to ensure the network of expertise among UMS alumni can be realized.

"Thus contributing the development of this university, the society and Sabah especially," he said.
