KOTA KINABALU: Free electricity supply and zero vagrants in Sabah were among aspirations shared by new intakes of University Malaysia Sabah on their vision for Sabah by 2050.

The sharing session was part of their induction programme held recently that was attended by National Transformation 50 (TN50) youth ambassadors, Arthur Joseph Kurup and Benreza Herezy Uzair.

One of the students from the Faculty of Psychology and Education suggested that the education system shift its focus more on stimulating interest in students to gain knowledge.

She also envisioned that in 30 years from now, children will be more excited in going to school.

Another student hoped to see no more vagrants in the streets by that time as there are centres that provide them with living skills. He also wished to see that energy will be consumed free by every citizen.
